“This entire experience was something I would have never thought of doing, but I took the leap and went for it and it has been the best experience of my life. There have also been many experiences I have taken advantage of while being here that were certainly out of my comfort zone, but it has made all the difference.”

“The combination of learning about Māori culture and language as well as being surrounded by Native Māori people with strong ties to those aspects of culture and more has made me realize how important it is for Native people to get educated and return to their homelands and make a difference in any way possible. Therefore, I am even more certain that after I complete my studies, I want to return home to Hawai‘i and help uplift my people and make Hawai‘i a better place for Hawaiians for generations to come.”

“As a Communication, Culture, and Media major, my research entails hands-on learning about different cultures and the way people interact in society.”

“Doing research abroad is one of the best ways to gain this experience, as it combines living in a different culture with doing historical research about it. It is incredible to see the influence of Māori culture around campus. The University and the surrounding city with all its cultural diversity is what makes it such a beautiful place to live, and adds to the experience I was looking for when I came to New Zealand.”

“I have experienced cultural diversity in other settings, but it is interesting that the University of Auckland takes students from parts of the world I know almost nothing about, like Malaysia, Indonesia, Australia, and the Pacific Islands.”

“I aspire to be a medical professional and I believe that the study abroad experience will help me to be a more open-minded doctor. I took courses that apply towards my neuroscience major, my pre-medical requirements and my philosophy major. In terms of content, the courses have been similar, besides the grading methods and the differing accents of the professors!”

“I joined the University of Auckland Basketball Club and the Science Interfaculty Basketball team – groups that allowed me to interact with peers in a setting where I felt comfortable. It was through these experiences that I made many of my current friends. The best way to create a successful platform for your experience at the University of Auckland is to take initiative, put yourself out there, and meet people.”
